BLACK HISTORY MONTH

INTERVIEW WITH CBABI BAYOC

Cbabi (pronounced Kuh-bob-bi) Bayoc is an internationally-known visual artist and illustrator residing in St. Louis, Missouri. His subjects include family, children, music and a bunch of other cool stuff designed with line, bold color and phunk!

Tell us about your background. Do you feel your culture or upbringing has had an effect on your work?

"I grew up in a military family and later attended a historically black college: Grambling State University. It had everything to do with my art and direction. It was there I chose my name CBABI, which stands for creative black artist battling ignorance."

In what way(s) do you feel art has the power to create change?

"Art can create moods and narratives that are seen through different lenses. Art can inspire the mindset in individuals so that they believe change is worth working towards."

GOT TEA?

I'VE GOT YOUR FACE!

Lady Gaga (left) and ORLAN (right).

Body modification artist, Orlan has already attempted to sue pop star Lady Gaga for plagiarism. Orlan claims that Lady Gaga stole her...face?

Known for undergoing multiple sessions of plastic surgery in the name of art, Orlan is claiming that Gaga ripped off two specific pieces, echoing the same alien-like aesthetic the French artist supposedly controls, and her lawyers were seeking response from the creative team responsible for Lady Gaga's mega-hit and award-winning video Born This Way. Orlan is currently 74 years old.

FAMOUS ARTIST OF THE WEEK

MEET EMMA AMOS

As a painter and printmaker, Emma Amos used a combination of bold colors, words, and textiles to create dynamic figurative works. In addition to her independent practice, Amos was a member of the historic African American artist collective Spiral Group, and was also one of the anonymous feminists behind the Guerrilla Girls.
